Norway Provides Fun and Activities for Its Teenagers

Norway has its share of juvenile delinquency, chiefly car thefts, but it is not a major problem. There is a growing recognition, however, that idleness breeds crime, and therefore, concerted efforts are being made to provide wholesome recreation for restless teenagers, with fun and activities.

Three Noteworthy Projects

Youth clubs, sponsored by various often by municipalities, have been religious and civic organizations established throughout the country, and many more are now being formed. In Oslo, the Municipal Youth Council, is running a very popular non-alcoholic youth restaurant, named Rondo, and will soon open a well-equipped youth motor denter. Both are financed by the Municipality of Oslo. Another interesting youth club, which features a weekly dance night, is run by five Roman Catholic nuns in Bodo, a nearly 100 per cent Protestant town in North Norway. This, too, receives public support.

Rondo, which offers dancing, good food, soft drinks, and non-alcoholic wine in stylish surroundings until 11:30 p.m., has proved to be very popular. During its first season the restaurant has had altogether some 42,000 teenage guests. A few days ago, the doors closed to open again next fall. Meantime, municipal government representatives from a number of other towns, including Trondheim, Tinsberg, and Drammen, have visited Rondo to get ideas for similar ventures.

Alcohol-free youth entertainment is often billed as "Rondo Night."

The Oslo youth restaurant was started last fall on the initiative of the Municipal Youth Council, with financial support from the city. Manager Ola K. Bakke, who runs the place, has no complaints at all about the conduct of his guests, whose age range runs from 18 to 24. The beautifully decorated night club is as spotless as when it opened, he says. Plenty of noise and very lively dancing, but no destructiveness. Questionnaires filled out by the guests show that they come from all parts of Oslo.

The chairman of the Youth Council Erling Faaland, is also pleased with Rondo. Some people love to talk about how awful teenagers are, he says. Rondo has proved that if young people are shown the same trust and treated the same way as grown-ups, they know how to behave themselves. And answers to the questionnaire indicate many interests besides dancing and fun.

Youth Motor Center

By the end of this month, the Youth Council will launch another project for Oslo youth. This is the Youth Motor Center, which so far has cost the city some Kr. 525,000. Located on the outskirts by the Tvervenbukta, this is designed to activate more than 1,000 teenage boys and girls whose main hobby is motorcycling. The 2-storey building will have a well equipped motor shop, to be run under the guidance of experts, a sizeable hall for dancing and movie shows, and an attractive cafeteria.

Consultant John Aas, who heads the project, says the purpose is to create an alluring alternative to loafing on street corners. And, judging from present indications the motor center has aroused considerable interest. Just by calling at hangouts for what some staid citizens refer to as "motor bums," Mr. Aas has been able to round up over 250 volunteers for work at the Hvervenbukta project. Prospective members have already formed a committee to plan activities. There will be race of all kinds, and courses in motor maintenance and traffic rules.

Dancing to hit tunes is the main attraction of the youth club organized by five intrepid Dominican nuns in Bodo. Every Thursday night, more than a hundred teenagers show up to twist and cha-cha for two hours. Music is provided by five alternating bands, whose members have all been trained by the nuns. Smoking is perfectly OK, and there is no religious indoctrination. Yet, according to Sister Carmel, the kids are just lovely and very well behaved. They treat the nuns as pals, but with due respect and deference. At present, the club has about 150 members, and only three of them are Roman Catholics.

The youth club, which includes a wide range of hobby activities for boys and girls, is supported by public authorities. Last year, it received Kr. 1,200 from the Municipality of Bodo and Kr. 2,000 from the Ministry of Social Affairs, which was used to buy tape recorder and movie projector.

Swedish Modern Music At World Festival

Sweden will be represented with two compositions of modern music at the 1963 World Music Festival in Amsterdam in June arranged by the ISCM (International Society for Contemporary Music).

The Swedish contribution will be Sven-Erik Back's "Favola" for clarinet and percussion instruments and "Constellations III" by Bengt Hambraeus. The latter work, which was chosen by the ISCM selection committee for the World Wide Festival in London last year but withdrawn from the programme in error, will be performed this year instead.

EDITORIAL

FROM THE SECRETARY'S DESK

By S. A. Sorenson

A constant duty of your secretary is to keep the MAILING LIST up to date. In phoning one lady to check on the correctness of her address, I asked, "Do you get the Scandinavian Centre News?" She replied, "I don't know, I get it so seldom." This reply made me wonder — is the Scandinavian Centre News appreciated? Is it serving a worthwhile purpose in our Scandinavian Community and the realization of a Centre? I am sure it is, but won't you write our editor and say so, or send a donation?

INGE ANDERSON APPOINTED TO BOARD

The vacancy on the Board of Directors left by Hans Kristensen has been filled by Inge Anderson. We welcome him to the Board. Mr. Anderson is a Civil Engineer with the Government of Alberta. His experience will serve well on the Board of Directors. Mr. Harold Markstrom, President, and S. A. Sorenson, Secretary, wished the guests "GOD TUR" to Scandinavia, and hoped that they would return inspired to assist in the building of the Scandinavian Centre.

DIRECTORS MEET WITH ARCHITECT

Dr. Minsos presented a rough sketch of the plans for the Scandinavian Centre to the Directors on May 31st. As discussion progressed, many worthwhile ideas were developed for the consideration of our architect.

The Planning Committee, under the direction of S. J. Johnson, were to continue the study of the plans in co-operation with the architect. Dr. Minsos said he would have detailed plans ready by July 1st.

The directors then agreed to call off the proposed Shareholders' Meeting of June 25th. It is impossible at the time of writing to say exactly when the shareholders will be called together to put their stamp of approval on the proposed plans.

Godard - Ogren Wedding Held

Grace United Church was the scene of a double ring ceremony when Rev. Johnston married Carol Godard, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Godard and Roger Lee Ogren, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. Ogren, all of Edmonton.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride chose a slipper length gown of white satin with a fitted bodice, styled with lily point sleeves and a scoop neckline. Her chapel veil was of white nylon tulle over a white pill box, sparkling with crystal beads. She carried a white Bible with white orchid shrouded with white stephanotis and green ivy. Her only jewellery was a single pearl and diamond necklace, a gift of the groom.

Attending the bride were Sheila Ogren, maid of honor, Mable Teltgen and Georgina Johnson as bridesmaids. Barbara Stogg was flower girl. All attendants were cousins of the bride, and all wore teal blue peau-de-soie with white head-pieces.

Mr. Horst Wolsf was best man. Eddie Henderson and Don Godard, brother of the bride, were the other attendants.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Godard wore a pink double-knit suit and pink straw hat with black accessories. Mrs. Ogren, mother of the groom, chose a blue lace dress with matching hat and white accessories.

After the ceremony the guests extended congratulations to the newlyweds at the reception held at the Captain's Cabin. For the occasion the bride's table was centered with a triple tiered wedding cake set in an attractive arrangement of pink carnations and white daisies.

Mr. and Mrs. Ogren left later on a wedding trip by car to Victoria, B.C. For the trip the bride wore a pink suit complemented with black accessories, and a corsage of white orchids.

On their return the couple will reside in the city.

Drunken Drivers Work In Lumber Camp

A privately owned lumber camp at Hornnes, in the West Agder scene of a novel experiment in how province of South Norway, is the to discourage drunken driving. Instead of serving the mandatory 21 days or more in Kristiansand District Prison, first offenders are put to work as lumberjacks.

The experiment was started last February on initiative of the Ministry of Justice. According to Deputy Police Commissioner Anders Eckhoff, it has so far proved very successful. The lumber company, too, is pleased with the results.

The camp at Hornnes, now under the jurisdiction of the prison in Kristiansand, consists of four movable barracks. Prisoners convicted of drunken driving occupy two — six in each. Guards live in another. The fourth serves as kitchen-living room.

Prison guard Finn Hoigaard reports that all of the lumberjack-inmates assigned to the novel camp have shown good conduct and rather seem to have enjoyed the experience. Paid on a piece-work basis, most of them have left the camp with quite a bit of money in their pockets. One-third of the total earnings is paid to prisoners as remuneration for their work. The rest is kept by the State to cover the cost of food and lodging.

The decision to introduce right-hand traffic in Sweden in 1967 was made by the Riksdag on May 10, with 294 votes in favour and 51 against. A referendum in 1955 showed an overwhelming majority for retaining the old system. In the recent Riksdag debate the minister of traffic recalled that while Sweden then had 500,000 motorcars, the number is now 1.5 million. In 1975 it is expected to reach 2.8 million. Motor traffic across the borders is growing rapidly, and the number of cars leaving or entering Sweden this year is estimated at five million.

TO MEMBERS OF THE 1962 CHRISTMAS FLIGHT,

This Flight has now been wound up, and a refund of $3.50 per ticket will be mailed to you as soon as possible.

To judge from all reports, the flight was a success in spite of bad weather and other unforeseeable happenings; it is gratifying to your directors to have made this service available to you.

You no doubt know that the Copenhagen Air Port Tax was raised from Kr. 7.00 to Kr. 15.00 while we were over there. This tax was paid out of the flight fund, thus reducing your refund from $5.75 to $3.50.

Our Association paper, in which this letter appears, and on which we depend so much, is having a hard time making ends meet. Advertising does not quite pay the cost of publication. Administration costs would take a great share of a small subscription fee, so we are not considering this. We do, however, thankfully accept donations to help defray the cost of printing and mailing.

It was a pleasure and privilege to act as your tour-leader, and I hope that you all enjoyed the trip as much as I did.

Yours sincerely,
GUS HANSEN,
Flight Director,
1962 Christmas Flight.

Smile Awhile

A psychiatrist ran into a former patient in a crowded department store while they both were waiting for an elevator.

“Mr. Smith, it’s good to see you,” the doctor said. “I still remember that deep inferiority complex you had. Worst I ever treated. I hope I did you some good.”

“I think so,” the little man said mildly. “Yes, I believe I’m better.”

Then the elevator appeared, and they both stepped inside. “Call your floors,” bellowed the operator.

“Five, please,” whispered the former patient. “That is, if it’s not

Solglyt Receives Awards

Membership promotion is vital to any organization, for an organization to flourish there must be invitation, incentive and initiation of members. For it is through new members that new ideas, new talent will emerge to bring the much needed vigor to keep things within the Lodge animated. Awards are made for membership drives. Solglyt has captured several.

This year Mr. Kalmar Amdam received the President of the Year Award (1962). The second time for such an award, his first was for the year 1961. He was one of 44 Lodge Presidents in the United States and Canada to receive the award for membership promotion. The award was a walnut desk set bearing a metal plate on which his name and the name of the Lodge was engraved. The Lodge and the chairman for the 1962 membership committee, Mr. Ole Borgersen, received certificates for “Outstanding Service” in recognition of their work in membership promotion.

Sons of Norway is a Fraternal Benefit Society with 250 lodges in the United States and Canada and is the largest fraternal organization of men, women and children of Norwegian extraction on the North American Continent. With a membership of about 36,000, it has $3p,000,000 of life insurance in force and assets of over $10,000,000.

Swedish Professor Erik Jorges, of the Karolinska Institute, Stockholm, has been awarded the Kr. 100,000 Anders Jahre Medical Prize for 1963. The prize is awarded annually by a foundation established by the Norwegian shipowner Anders Jahre.

Radio Norway Calling Emigrants

Radio Norway, the short-wave service of Norwegian Broadcasting Company, will this summer present a series of programs of special interest to emigrants, all featuring talks and music recorded at get-togethers of town and country clubs in Oslo.

The first of these short-wave programs, from the Numedal Club in the Norwegian Capital, will be transmitted May 23. It will be beamed to the East Coast of North America at 9 a.m. EDST on these frequencies: 15175, 11850 and 9610 Megacycles. The latter frequencies will also be used for a West Coast transmission at 8 p.m. PST.

Radio Norway and Numedalslaget in Oslo hope that many emigrant Numedoler will tune in these interesting programs. In the period 1850 to 1919, about 20 per cent of the population in the Numedal district emigrated to U.S.A. Most of them settled in North Dakota and Minnesota. Three U.S. Senators have been descendants of these emigrants. Best known, perhaps, is former Senator Alexander Wiley.

Plenty Of Camping Space In Oslo

The municipality of Oslo plans to invest nearly Kr. 500,000 to provide better camp sites for tourists this summer. Altogether there will be space for about 1,000 tents. At the rate of three-to-a-tent, that should accommodate some 3,000 visitors to the Norwegian capital. Sanitary standards will be improved to conform with the strict requirements for getting approval by state authorities.

There will be a number of changes. A new 350-tent site will be established at Storljan. Two other camp sites, Stubljan and Helsfyr, will be discontinued. The latter is due to be replaced by a 350-tent site at Ekeberg Mansion, with w.c. and other facilities. The capacity of sanitary facilities at Bogstad Camp will be greatly expanded at a cost of several hundred thousand kroner.

For its own residents, Oslo maintains camp sites, which have space for altogether some 1,000 tents, mostly along the Oslofjord. These can accommodate several thousand excursionists.

Khrushchev May Visit Sweden

The Soviet Premier, Nikita Khrushchev, may visit Sweden in the near future, probably in August or early September. The question was discussed when he received the Swedish Foreign Minister, Torsten Nilsson, in the Kremlin on May 17. Both parties expressed hopes for an official visit to Sweden in accordance with the invitation issued several years ago by the Swedish government.

The Swedish invitation to Mr. Khrushchev dates back to the spring of 1956 when Prime Minister Tage Erlander visited the Soviet Union. Similar invitations had then been extended by the Premiers of Norway and Denmark during their visits to Moscow. The fall of the same year, however, brought the uprising in Hungary and the Soviet intervention, which caused a violent reaction in the Scandinavian countries. The three governments, therefore, did not pursue their invitations.

Early in 1959 Mr. Khrushchev was again invited to a tour of the Scandinavian countries, and the visit was set for August of that year. In the middle of July, however, the Soviet leader suddenly cancelled or at least postponed his trip. In the case of Sweden, the reason given by the Soviet government was that a campaign had been waged against the scheduled visit and against Mr. Khrushchev personally. In its answer to Moscow the Swedish government said that the Soviet description of the state of opinion in Sweden did not correspond to actual conditions, but it also stressed "the existence in this country of freedom of the press and freedom of assembly based on Swedish traditions and was announced that Mr. Khrushchev Swedish law." Early in August it would visit the United States in September, and many Swedish observers then saw a definite connection between this development and the cancellation of Mr. Khrushchev's Scandinavian tour. The Soviet Premier, a leading Stockholm paper wrote, "obviously must have lost most of his interest in Scandinavia, and at the same time he was given a free chance to remind the Scandinavian countries that they are mortal or, at least, small."

Opposition Won't Fight This Time
Today the climate in relations between Sweden and the Soviet Union is much better than four years ago. The Swedish opposition leaders, who in 1959 said that Mr. Khrushchev would not be welcome, have no intention to try to stop his visit this time, provided that it not be used for propaganda purposes.

"I do not like visits by dictators," says the Conservative leader, Dr. Gunnar Heckscher, "but if Mr. Khrushchev now should come as the guest of the government, then the rules of hospitality must be respected. Tensions have eased considerably since 1959, and a certain improvement has taken place in at least some of the satellite countries."

Dr. Bertil Ohlin of the Liberal party also voices skepticism in regard to so-called goodwill visits by totalitarian leaders, but adds that Sweden must try to maintain diplomatic, scientific and cultural exchanges with other countries regardless of their political systems.

Norway Takes Seat In U.N. Security Council

On April 17, 1963, Norway took of the United Nations Security its seat as a non-permanent member Council, to which it was elected for a 2-year term by the General Assembly on Oct. 17, 1962. The term will expire Dec. 31, 1964. Previously, Norway was a member of the Security Council in 1949-50. Last week's session was attended by Ambassador Sivert A. Nielsen, Norway's permanent representative to the United Nations and the Security Council.

Honor Appreciated

The 11-member Council met for the first time this year to hear Senegal charge that aircraft from Portuguese Guinea bombed a Senegalese village April 8, injuring one person and destroying one mud hut. The Portuguese delegate strongly denied that the attack had taken place. At the start of the meeting, the four newly elected members — Brazil, Morocco, the Philippines and Norway — were extended a cordial welcome by the Security Council's chairman for the month of April, Lieu Chieh, permanent representative of Nationalist China.

Ambassador Nielson, responding to the chairman's welcome, observed in part: "The people of Norway and the Norwegian Government are appreciative of the honor which the World Body has conferred upon us. We shall do our utmost to merit the confidence of the Organization. We are also fully cognizant of the serious duties and responsibilities which are entrusted to this most vital organ of the United Nations. The Charter has placed particular obligations and tasks upon us as one of the six elected members of the Security Council. We shall at all times keep these obligations in mind. Within the confines of the Charter provisions, Norway will endeavour to make a constructive contribution to the deliberations of this Council.

To Help Ease Tensions

"Norway has always been and still remains unflinchingly committed to the principle of settling international disputes by peaceful means. We believe that in the world of today the maintenance of peace and security entails recognition of equal rights and self-determination for all peoples in a framework of respect for the ideals of basic liberties and fundamental human rights. In the Security Council, we shall strive to uphold these principles in our endeavour to contribute to the easing of existing tensions in international affairs.

"Norway has once before had the privilege of serving on the Security Council. In the intervening period, the United Nations has undergone a profound change as a result of its membership having nearly doubled mainly through the admission of new independent states. We have welcomed this development. We do not believe in any form of oppression or exploitation of one people by another.

"We are convinced that the continued emancipation of dependent peoples is inevitable and desirable. We shall, therefore, support the right of every nation to determine its own destiny without unwarranted interference. Norway is of the opinion that the Security Council can play an important role by assuring that the process towards independence will be peaceful and harmonious."

Danish-Norwegian Talks On EFTA

Proposals to accelerate the reduction of internal tariffs among the week by Norway, which is especially interested in concessions on fish and fish products, and Denmark, which is vitally concerned about tariffs on its agricultural products. Final discussions between the two countries will be held at the Nordic Foreign Ministers Meeting in Oslo April 26.

At the end of last week's meeting, held in Oslo, Norwegian Commerce Minister O. C. Gundersen expressed confidence that satisfactory results would be achieved in the bilateral talks due to be completed before the EFTA Council Meeting in May.

Mr. Gundersen observed that when EFTA was established in 1959, Norway felt there was a reasonable balance between the interests of the Seven. A 10-year program was then adopted for liquidation of internal tariffs on industrial goods. Current proposals for moving up the cut-off target to 1966, he maintained were chiefly in the interest of the most advanced industrial EFTA nations. Norway and Denmark, which are not particularly interested in accelerating the tariff reductions, would naturally demand concessions in other fields to maintain the original balance of interests, he declared.

Exploring The Skagerak Bottom

The upper strata of the earth crust under the Skagerak, an arm of the North Sea between Denmark and Norway, are the subject of a joint investigation by Norwegian, Danish and West German scientists. The primary objective is to study the geological structure, especially across the Norwegian Channel. This is the area which international oil companies reportedly are exploring for possible pockets of oil and natural gas. There is no direct connection between this search and the scientific study which is subsidized by NATO's Civilian Subcommittee for Oceanographic Research.

Dr. Hans Holtedahl, of Bergen University, reports that preliminary results of the 3-nation investigation conducted last summer indicate that the geological submarine border between Denmark and Norway extends farther north than previously presumed. This summer, planes flying from Kristiansand, Norway, will take magnetic measurements of the Skagerak bottom. The research project is due to be greatly expanded next summer when scientists will examine the composition and the thickness of the earth crust under the Skagerak as well as in the land areas of Norway and Denmark.

Meanwhile, Norwegian authorities are considering inquiries from five international consortiums concerning possibilities for oil drilling in North Sea areas within or outside Norwegian waters.

Orchids and carnations are now being exported from nurseries in East Norway to Italy, France, Spain, Belgium, Switzerland, Sweden and Finland. Air-freighted, the flowers arrive at their destination the same day they are picked.

Motor-torpedo-boats and mine-sweepers from Norway, Great Britain, Denmark and West Germany took part in a NATO naval exercise May 22-24.
